Found His Mare.

John O'Daniel came to Lebanon from his home in the country last Saturday left his mare hitched in the lot back of Spalding's mill. When John got ready to go home his mare was missing. He came to Lebanon Monday and reported his loss to Detective J. A. Thompson, who took up the case. About seven o'clock that evening the mare was recovered, someone having ridden her to town and hitched her in a livery stable. No arrests have been made, but it is understood that the guilty party is known and the matter will be reported to the next grand jury. O'Daniel was overflowing with joy, excitement, etc., when he recovered the animal, and his maneuvers caused a large crowd to congregate around the stable where his much prized mare was hitched. Not wishing to take any chances he at once mounted and made a bee line for home.—Lebanon Falcon.

A Frightful Wreck

of train, automobile or buggy may cause cuts, bruises, abrasion, sprains or wounds that demand Bucklen's Arnica Salve - earth's greatest healer. Quick relief and prompt cure results. ### Robbery At Calvary.

The general store of Walters & Luckett at Calvary was broken into last Thursday night, the safe blown open and about twenty dollars in change left in it over night was stolen. The thieves left no clue, so far as can be learned, that might lead to their capture. The robbery is the first of the kind to take place in the county for several years, and is believed to have been the work of experienced men.

After gaining entrance to the building by forcing the front door the robbers placed a tarpaulin, which they found in the store, against the door in order to deaden, as much as possible, the noise of the explosion. The explosion was heard by several people, but believing it to be a pistol shot little attention was paid to it, and the robbery was not discovered until the next morning when the store was opened for the day.—Lebanon Enterprise.

for Quick Relef From Hay Fever

St. Rose Cemetery.

Fr. McGonigle, the prior of St. Rose, requests that not only each family in the congregation, but far and near, who have friends buried in the cemetery, donate at least $1.50 toward cleaning it up. With the expenditure of about $1,000 St. Rose cemetery can be made the most beautiful spot in Washington county—naturally it is beautifully situated, and if once graded and put in order, it can be kept so by a very small tax from year to year. No doubt to many $1,000 looks like a large sum of money to raise but if each family who have friends resting there would donate from $5 to $10 the amount would soon be realized and the donation would not only be given in a noble cause, but in the fulfilment of a duty to their departed friends, to the priests of St. Rose, to the community and to themselves. If the old cemetery is once beautified as it can and should be, the people can then look upon it with that same feeling of pride that they must have when they enter the grand old church. The people of St. Rose are never called upon in vain, true, "What is everybody's business is nobody's business," and for reason things of importance are sometimes direfully neglected, but when someone takes the lead all follow with a willing and ready response. Fr. McGonigle has now gone to work to have the cemetery beautified, but without the co-operation of those who have friends buried there and to whose interest the beauty of the place belongs, the work will fall through; but if all unite and do their part towards the work by donating a small sum of money, the cemetery will soon be in keeping with the church, and will not only be the pride of the community, but of the county as well. ### Foley Kidney Pills

Tonic in quality and action, quick in results. For backache, headache, dizziness, nervousness urinary irregularities and rheumatisam. Haydon & Robertson.

Wealthy Nelson County Man Dies of Old Age.

Bardstown, Ky., Aug. 18.—D. J. Wood, 91 years of age, one of Nelson county's oldest and wealthiest citizens, was buried here this afternoon. Mr. Wood died of old age Tuesday and the funeral this afternoon was attended by friends with whom Mr. Wood had been associated for years from all over Nelson county. Mr. Wood's death Tuesday did not come as a surprise, for he had been ill for some time, and on account of his advanced age it was not expected that he would survive.

Mr. Wood was a resident of Nelson county for sixty seven years. He was born in Simpsonville Shelby county, November 19, 1819; and came here to establish a business before he had reached his majority. He devoted his whole life to the drug business.

During the past six or eight years Mr. Wood had been closely associated with Congressman Ben Johnson in the banking business.

Mr. Wood is survived by five children, Mrs. Alice Barkhurst, of Bardstown; Mrs. Charles L. Thomas Louisville; Mrs. Ansell Donohue, of Buffalo, Larue county; Mrs. S. C. Crume, of Bardstown, and D. J Wood, Jr., of Bardstown.

The Study of Esperanto.

The new universal language, Esperanto, has received new impetus from the recent session of the International Congress in Washington. It is a language by which international conversation is made not only possible but easily so. By means of this language the Japanese and the German can converse most intelligibly, without either having the slightest knowledge of the other's native tongue and so with any or all nationalities. It is claimed the language will prove helpful to commerce, science and general culture. The movement is exciting great and wide-spread interest.—Ex.

FARMERS INSTITUTE

Will Be Held This Year On September 21 and 22.

The Farmers Institute will be held this year September 21 and 22. It is to be hoped that a larger attendance will be secured this year than last. Last year the Institute was held under disadvantages as it was held on the day preceding election day and Election day itself.

Interest in Farmers Institutes is increasing over the State, despite the fact that many are inclined to decry their merits, and indulge the notion that they are all theory and not practical. The Agricultural Department has obviated this objection by securing men who are practical farmers to conduct the Institute. And notwithstanding the fact that they are practical farmers they are at the same time men, who have tested the theories of farming, in a manner, making experiment stations of their farm.

The Lecturers who have been here in the past few years have been men who could deliver their ideas in an interesting style.

The Institute this year should attract a good crowd as there is much which will be of benefit to the most up-to-date farmers.

It has been the aim and desire of the Agricultural Department to have the farms conducted along scientific lines, as there is more of science in farming than in any other occupation. And while Institutes have not been so well attended as they should have been, their influence has been felt, and no one can be so pessimistic as to say that farming conditions are not better. In our own county how much better kept are the farms, than they were a few years ago. How much more effort is there to preserve the soil, instead of destroying it And with the better conduct of the farm, the price of land has advanced accordingly. This improvement has been gradual but sure and promises well to continue.

The is more Catarrh in this section of country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surface of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars any testimonials.

Address: F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by Druggists, 75c.

103 Years Old

Thompkinsville, Ky., Aug. 12.—Mrs. Polly Boone, of McFarland, this county, "Aunt Pop" as she is generally called aged 103 years, was in this place this week for the first time in years. She was born and reared in this county near where she now lives, and was never at any time more than forty miles away from home. She says she never saw a train in her life, but had "heard a great deal of talk about them."

She has been married twice, her second husband was Jesse Boone, a nephew of the famous hunter, Daniel Boone.

She has several children, grandchildren, great grandchildren and great, great grandchildren. She was accompanied to town by her son, Samuel Boone, with whom she now lives and who is nearly 70 years of age.

"Aunt Pop" still retains her mental faculties despite her advanced age and physical infirmities. She is not able to walk unassisted and is totally blind, but still insists that she would be perfectly happy and contented if she were only to see how to "card and spin." She always made her own support that way until about four or five years ago.

Why Salves Fail To Cure Eczema

Scientists are now agreed that the eczema germs are lodged not in the outer skin or epidermis, but in the inner skin. Hence, a penetrating liquid is required, not an outward salve that clogs the pores.

We recommend to all eczema patients the standard prescription Oil of Wintergreen as compounded in liquid form known as D. D. D. Prescription. A trial bottle of this D. D. D. Prescription, at only 25 cents, will instantly relieve the itch. We have sold and recommended this remedy for years, and know of wonderful cures from its use. We recommend it to our patrons. Haydon & Robertson.

Injured by Automobile.

Miss Lula Anderson the eighteen year old daughter of Mr. Quint Anderson, was injured by an automobile Monday night at ten p. m. in front of J. H. Gilkeson's. She was in a buggy with Mr. Baxter Minor and Miss Bessie Sullivan. In the automobile were Mr. and Mrs. Joe Grondwell, of Louisville, W. H. McElroy, Mrs. Sadie Doom Montsomery and Wallace Montgomery The machine was moving comparatively slow. Miss Anderson, fearing that the horse would become frightened, sprang from the buggy directly in front of the automobile. The driver of the auto tried unsuccessfully to stop the machine, which struck Miss Anderson, passed over her and dragged her perhaps twenty feet. Though she was badly bruised and shaken up, she was fortunate in not being more seriously injured.—Lebanon Falcon.

Daring Robbery Attempted.

Sunday night about 12:30 a Mr. Freeman, of Washington county, was held up at the point of a pistol by two unknown men on Greenville street near the residence of Mrs Julia Dalton, but he dissuaded the men from taking his money. After his escape he notified the officers and together with Messrs William Barns and Cecil Bohon, who saw the altercation from their window at Mrs. Dalton's, they went to the circus grounds in search of the thugs, but could not find them in the darkness Monday the young men had Chief Smith arrest a man, but Mr. Freeman would not say positively that he was one of his assailants and the prisoner was set at liberty.—Harrodsburg Republican.

From Sickness to "Excellent Health"

So says Mrs. Chas. Lyon, Peoria, Ill.: "I found in your Foley Kidney Pills a prompt and speedy cure for backache and kidney troble which bothered me for many months. I am now enjoying excellent health which I owe to Foley Kidney Pills." Haydon & Robertson.

Crops in the South.

From points in the South come reports of a general increase in crop yields following the substitution of corn and forage crops on part of the land formerly entirely devoted to cotton and tobacco. With diversified crops have come cattle and hogs into sections where beef, bacon and lard have always been secured from a distance. In central Tennessee, for instance, the tobacco crop promises to be unusually heavy, although the largest corn acreage on record is supporting a bumper crop and luxuriant pastures cover much of the country, Where at the village store farmers used to sit and smoke in silence there are now animated discussions about live stock, crops and fertility. Added variety of product is instilling new interest in the farm, and an increased farm income is stimulating progress.

FOLLOWING THE BAND.

Pageantry Appeals to the Negro's Tropical Imagination.

Once upon a time a Philadelphia lawyer came south. He had a pair of big spectacles, an inquisitive mind, and he wanted to know, says Harris Dickson in Success Magazine. With his southern friend he was hurrying to the courthouse. A negro parade blocked the street—negroes in carriages, on horseback, on foot; negroes with swords and axes, stumpy negroes with Masonic banners, lean negroes with Pythian devices, fat negroes with Odd Fellows' insignia, miscellaneous negroes with miscellaneous emblems.

The Philadelphian pushed through the crowd and ran back in great excitement. "What's it all about? What are they doing?"

The southerner couldn't explain, but beckoned to a very intelligent young negro—who, by the way, was a prominent politician—and asked, "Tom, what's the occasion for all this parade?"

The young negro laughed. "Now, judge, you ought to know dat a nigger don't need no 'casion for a parade."

Tom had spoken a mouthful. Pageantry appeals to the negro's tropical imagination. Churches and lodges furnish most of the social life that he knows. He does not ask why the brass band is playing. He keeps step with the fellow that beats the drum and is happy.

DANCING ROLAND.

A Scotch Shepherd's Remedy For All Kinds of Maladies.

A highland shepherd, one Donald McAlpin, a famous dancer, was reputed to have cured his mistress of a mysterious malady by means of dancing a reel with her, and this story being noised abroad gained him the reputation of being a successful physician. His humble cottage in Stockmuick, overlooking Strathspey, was besieged with crowds of patients who hoped to get rid of their ailments by a dance with Donald. The shepherd did not hesitate to take advantage of this stroke of good luck and soon had a large and thriving practice.

The treatment adopted was very simple, the main features being as follows: In cases of indigestion moderate doses of medicated "aqua" were taken, followed by the reum shull, or promenade step. For catarrh Donald prescribed in order to produce perspiration a large dose of gruel mixed with honey and butter, followed by reum crack, or highland fling. All the different processes terminated in the patient being well wrapped up in warm blankets, and the doses of medicine and dancing were repeated according to the patient's constitution and the nature of his disease.—British Medical Journal.

LIGHTNING

Fires Barn, And Burns Four Valuable Horses.

On last Sunday morning at about 6:30 o'clock during the electrical storm, the barn of Mr. J. O. Polin was struck by lightning, set on fire, and the barn with contents and two fine mares and two colts were destroyed.

The horses were being prepared for exhibition at the Fair and Mr. John A. Polin had left the barn but one half hour before it was discovered in flames Upon reaching the barn it was found to be all aflame in all parts with all chance of entrance barred. The horses were highly valued and the loss will be approximately $1,500 with no insurance.

Trial bot tle free at Haydon & Robertson.

Flew The Coop

Charles and Ed Williams, the two colored pick-pockets who were arrested here circus day, and given 30 days in the work house, flew the coop Wednesday morning. In charge of Dave Robinson they were started out from the work-house to begin manipulation on the city rock pile, but in a few moments they began to walk so fast that their keeper had difficulty in keeping pace with them, and called to them, "Come back here." His answer was a farewell wave of the hand, and the reply, that they would come back after awhile, and they broke into a run. The keeper had started out without his pistol, but he is wiser now, and the next time he is sent to guard two circus followers he'll surely take his gun along. The two prisoners continued their flight and the last seen of them was as they were disappearing through the Fair Grounds, going so fast that a Cadillac couldn't catch them.—Harrodsburg Herald.

To keep your health sound: to avoid the ills of advancing years; to conserve your physical forces for a ripe and healthful old age, guard your kidneys by taking Foley's Kidney Remedy, Haydon & Robertson.

The Telephone and Judge Gaynor.

Judge Gaynor missed a great deal in not using it if he knew it. One can see the telephone engineer attached to the Roman postoffice endeavoring, but without avail, to get an instrument installed at the capitol and at the palace. "I am instructed by the emperor to say that he does not desire these Parisian novelties, and so Thomas Alva Edisonus need not call again with his magician's apparatus." A signal blunder! We can imagine what would have happened. "Hello, 2187 Tiber! Is it thou, Artemidorus? I understand thou rangst me up this morning. What? Details of a plot? Go not to the senate today! Beware of Brutus? Go not near Casca? Right, and I thank thee, Artemidorus. I will have an extra guard put on instantly and the conspirators arrested." And so though Artemidorus was unable to give his warning in the street, he gave it over the telephone, and Caesar's valuable life and with it the fortunes of Rome were saved.—St. James' Gazette.

A Gloomy African Pool.

There is a large, deep and mysterious pool in the valley of the upper Kafue river, northwestern Rhodesia. This wonderful pool lies in flat country, and one comes to it quite suddenly, its banks being concealed by dense forest. There is a small native village near the pool, and the inhabitants have a superstitious dread of it. They refuse to drink the water or use it for any purpose whatever. To sit beside this still, pellucid pool of unknown depth, surrounded by precipitous walls in the heart of the tropical forest, would induce a feeling of awe in the breast of even the most civilized man. —London Mail.

Sport and Athletics In America.

Sport and athletics in America are vastly different terms. Sport should be play, not work. Athletics as practiced in general are too strenuous, too spectacular and too exclusive. We are not an athletic nation. Far from it. We talk athletics, but there is too much grand stand and too little actual participation in games.—Malcolm Ropsech Gordon in Century.

Commissioners Count Vote; Notice of Contest is Filed.

The county board of Election Commissioners, composed of Sheriff John A Burton, chairman, N. R. Harmon and J. T. Kemp, met at the county court clerks office Monday, and canvassed the vote cast at the recent local option election. The Board found the result to be the wets having a majority of thirteen over the drys. The total vote was 353 to 340.

During the progress of the count Monday, formal objection was made by Attorney L. S. Pence, representing the drys, who claimed that under the law it was the duty of the Board to canvass only the vote of legal elections; that the recent election was not valid and that the Board should not therefore canvass the returns. The Board, however, held that it was not within its jurisdiction to pass upon the legality of the election; that it's duty was merely to count the vote as it existed, and that questions involving the validity should come before the contest board. This board is composed of the county judge, and the two magistrates of the county residing nearest the county seat.

Soon after the Election Commissioners had completed the canvass of the vote, notice of contest was filed with the county judge, and, pending a settlement of the question, the certificate which the Board issued and certified to the county court will not be spread upon the county court records. The statutes provide that a contest of the kind shall be heard on the fourth Monday following the date it is filed, and according to this the matter will come up before County Judge Carter on Monday September 12. The notice of contest contains the names of thirteen well known citizens. The grounds of the contest are as follows:

First - Because, as shown by the records of the Marion county court, the petition for said election was filed on the 6th day of June, 1910, a regular term of the Marion county court, and on the same day, and in the same order the said election was ordered by said court, to be held on the 11th day of Aug. 1910; and no order of court filing said petition, or ordering said election, was made or entered, at any regular or special term of said court; and for said reason the said pretended election was and is absolutely void and of no effect, and no vote cast thereat should be counted as a legal vote, and no certificate of the result should, or can be legally received or recorded.

Second—Because the petition, as filed in the Marion county court on the 6th day of June, 1910, was not such a petition as required by law; because it contained the names of a large number of persons who did not sign the petition, and the names of some were repeated several times on the petition as it signed by different persons, when in fact the same persons either signed several times, or others signed for them; and because a large number of the names signed to the petition were not the names of legal voters of the city of Lebanon.—Enterprise.

They Have a Definite Purpose

Foley Kidney Pills give quick relief in cases of kidney and bladder ailments. Mrs. Rose Glaser Terre Haute, Ind., tells the result in her case. "After suffering many years from a serious case of kidney trouble and spending money for so called cures, I found Foley Kidney Pills the only medicine that gave me a permanent cure. I am again able to be up and attend to my work. I shall never hesitate to recommend them." Haydon & Robertson.

Col. S. D. Bottom, of Perryville, was a visitor at the Republican office last week and says he is writing a history of the Perryville battle from the viewpoint of an eye-witness. He owns a part of the old battle field and says that he is doing all in his power to have a National park made of the ground. A bill asking that this be created a National park, has been introduced in Congress but has not been passed on.

EXECUTOR'S SALE

As executor of the will of T. M. Lanham, I will on

Saturday, Sept., 17,

about the hour of 1:30 p.m., on the premises, sell at public auction the farm containing about owned by the late T. M. Lanham. The farm is situated about one and one-half miles West of Springfield on the Smith Mill turnpike. The farm is in a high state of cultivation and has on it an excellent frame dwelling containing 7 rooms and all other necessary outbuildings. This is one of the best watered farms in Washington county and contains an excellent orchard of apples and small fruits.

The sale will be on a credit of one-fourth cash, the remainder in one, two, three and four years. The bonds for the deferred payments to bear interest from date and payable annually and to contain a clause that in default of any installment of interest or any note all of the notes to become due and payable at the option of the owners. Any information that any purchaser may desire or wishes to see the place call on H. A. Rudd or W. A. Clements.

Hettie Rudd.
Executor of T. M. Lanham.

No Chance In History.

Mazzini said that he did not believe that chance existed in history. "A cause must necessarily underlie every event, although for the moment it may appear as the result of apparently accidental circumstances. An Alexander, a Cæsar, a Napoleon, are not the results of accident, but the inevitable product of the time and nation from which they spring. It was not Cæsar who destroyed the Roman republic. The republic was dead before Cæsar came. Sulla, Marius, Catiline, preceded and foreshadowed Caesar, but he, gifted with keener insight and greater genius, snatched the power from them and concentrated it in his own hands. For there was no doubt that he was fitter to rule than all the others put together. At the same time, supposing he had appeared 150 years earlier, he would not have succeeded in destroying the republic. When he came the life had already gone out of it, and even Caesar's death could not restore that."

NEBULA HYPOTHESIS,

One of the Most Interesting Propositions of Science.

WHAT IT ACTUALLY MEANS.

That the Sun, Planets and All Matter Were Once a Vast Mass of Incandescent Gas All Jumbled Together in an Enormous Chaotic Cloud.

Everybody has heard the phrase, the nebula hypothesis, but what is it?

In a few words this is the meaning of "nebula hypothesis:" That the sun, the planets and all that is in them were at one time in the inconceivably remote past a vast mass of chaotic, incandescent gas all jumbled together in an enormous nebula, or cloud.

To begin with, the first conception that science has dared to make, however, takes us one step further back Without mentioning the origin of matter itself science conceives that in the beginning all matter was uniformly distributed throughout space — that there were no stars, no planets, no satellites, but that all space was filled with the matter we now have divided up into very fine particles some distance apart. The consistency of such material was perforce very thin indeed, much more rarefied than the highest vacuum we can obtain now by air pumps. From this state to the nebulous state the theory has a missing link, one that can only be satisfied by supposing divine command, for it assumes, in the words of Professor Todd, that "gradually centers of attraction formed and these centers pulled in toward themselves other particles. As a result of the inward falling of matter toward these centers, the collision of its particles and their friction upon each other the material masses grew hotter and hotter. Nebulae seeming to fill the entire heavens were formed—luminous fire mist, like the filmy objects still seen in the sky though vaster and exceedingly numerous." This process is supposed to have gone on for countless ages, faster in some regions than in others. Many million nebulae were formed and set in rotation around their own axes. This happily can be explained by science. Whenever particles are attracted toward a center and are kept from falling directly to this center a whirlpool is formed, rotating in one direction. An example of this, though humble and not exactly analogous, is the rotation of water in a basin when the stopper is pulled out of the bottom. Gravity attracts the water immediately above the hole, which starts flowing out, thus leaving a space to be filled. The rest of the water rushes in from all sides to do this, and the whirlpool is the result.

Now each of these whirling nebulae became exceedingly hot, and each formed what is known as a star or sun, our sun being one. The earth and other planets had not then come into separate existence, of course, as it is supposed that they were thrown off later from the sun.

Our sun in its nebulous form and rotating swiftly on its axis gradually flattened at its poles on account of centrifugal motion. This phenomenon is entirely familiar to those who have seen a ball of clay on a potter's wheel gradually flatten. The motion was so swift and the mass so nebulous that the sun to be took the shape of a disk. As time went on the outer part became cool and somewhat rigid, while the inner part continued its cooling and contracting. Thus the latter part drew away from the outer, leaving a ring of matter whirling around on the outside. This breaking off of the ring is supposed to be hastened by the inability of the outside to keep up the swift motion of the central mass, both on account of the slight cohesion and of the centrifugal force. But this particular part of the argument has nothing to stand on if the first law of motion is true.

In the successive stages of the sun's contraction this process was repeated over and over again, until several rings were ... circling around the central ... They would necessarily be in the ... same plane. Now, these rings, not being uniform in mass or thickness, would each gradually accumulate toward the densest portion until they, too, would form a ball which would subsequently flatten, and if the substance continued nebulous and the ball was large enough they would also slough rings.

Of course the rings the sun discarded have become the planets, which, as required by the theory, are all very nearly in the same plane. The ring that the planets formed have become moons or satellites. So we are driven to conclude that our sun at one time filled all the space from his present position to the farthest planet in the solar system.

From this theory there is another thing that we have to believe, and that is that every star in the heavens has gone through this same process and has a family of planets sailing around it, just as our sun has. It would be impossible to see these planets, of course, for it is impossible to see a star, even with the greatest telescope, except as a mere point of light.

As regards the proving of this nebula hypothesis, of course it cannot be done. But everything points to its accuracy. Many nebulae are seen even now among the stars that seem to be going through the delayed process of world forming. Around one of the planets of our own solar system, Saturn, are ... rings, which are probably destined in time to become moons, in the opinion of some scholars.—A. T. Hadley in New York Tribune.

STANLEY AS A FIGHTER.

His Revenge on the Africans For Attacking His Forces.

In the following language Sir Henry M. Stanley describes an attack of natives upon his party during one of his African expeditions: "The leviathans bears down on us with racing speed, its consorts to either flank, spouting the water into foam and shooting up jets with their sharp prows. A thrilling chant from 2,000 throats rises louder and louder on our hearing. Presently the poised spears are launched, and a second later my rifles respond with a rippling, cracking explosion, and the dark bodies of the canoes and paddlers rush past us.

"For a short time the savages are paralyzed, but they soon recover. They find there is death in those flaming tubes in the hands of the strangers, and with possibly greater energy than they advanced they retreat, the pursued becoming the pursuers in hot chase. My blood is up. It is a murderous world, and I have begun to hate the filthy, vulturous shoals who inhabit it.

"I pursue them upstream, up to their villages. A skirmish in their streets, drive them pellmell into the woods beyond and level their ivory temples. With frantic haste I fire their huts and end the scene by towing their canoes into midstream and setting them adrift."

RAVENOUS EATERS.

Gluttony of Soliman and the Appetite of Louis XIV.

Touching the matter of eating, the stories told by the old chroniclers and historians of the abnormal appetites of certain Roman and oriental men of note fairly stagger belief.

Gibbon tells of Soliman, a caliph in the eighth century, who died of acute indigestion in his camp near Chalcis, in Syria, just as he was about to lead an army of Arabs against Constantinople. He had emptied two baskets of eggs and figs, which he swallowed alternately, and the repast was finished with marrow and sugar. In a pilgrimage to Mecca the same caliph had eaten with impunity at a single meal seventy pomegranates, a kid, six fowls and a large quantity of the grapes of Tayef.

Such a statement would defy belief were not others of a similar character well avouched. Louis XIV could hardly boast of an appetite as ravenous as Soliman's, but he would eat at a sitting four platefuls of different soups, a whole pheasant, a partridge, a plate full of salad, mutton hashed with garlic, two good sized slices of ham, a dish of pastry and finish this ample repast with fruit and sweetmeats.—London Saturday Review.

Victorian Gods.

If Thackeray, with a brain weighing fifty-eight and one-half ounces, had the biggest head among Victorian writers who had the best features? The choice would seem to lie between Tennyson and Henry Taylor. "That man must be a poet," remarked one of his Cambridge contemporaries when he first saw Tennyson come into the hall at Trinity, and another friend describes him in his undergraduate days as six feet high, broad chested, strong limbed, his face Shakespearean, with deep eyelids; his forehead ample, crowned with dark wavy hair; his head finely poised, his hand the admiration of sculptors. But time dealt none too gently with Tennyson, whereas Henry Taylor, always a distinguished looking man, seems to have grown singularly majestic with years. Grant Duff, meeting him when he was over eighty, notes that "Taylor looks more like Jupiter than ever," and contemporary memoirs are full of references to his Jove-like appearance.—London Standard.

HIS BUMPS.

The Explanation Given by the Book on Phrenology.

They were newly married and were calling upon one of the friends of the bride who had been particularly pleasant upon the occasion of their wedding. The bridegroom, apropos of nothing, began to talk about phrenology and told how his wife had discovered two very prominent bumps on the back of his head. He was proud of them. So was she, and she passed him around that the host and hostess might feel the bumps and know of their existence. Then she explained:

"My book on phrenology says that they mean good memory and generosity."

It was evident that she was proud of the facts, and so was he. But the host, being of an inquiring turn of mind, wished to satisfy himself, so he got down a phrenological work from one of his library shelves and after much labor found the bumps on the chart. Turning to the notes, he read, seriously at first, then unsteadily. The bride became suspicious, but she was game and said:

"Read it out loud. Please do!" And the host read:

"These bumps are most frequently found on cats and monkeys."

Other topics consumed the remainder of the visit, which was brief.—New York Sun.

THE CABINET LEAK.

Daniel Webster Was Not Long in Discovering Its Source.

Once years ago, when Daniel Webster was secretary of state, there was an important foreign matter up for discussion before the cabinet, and the utmost secrecy was of course maintained, but the whole thing was blazoned about in a few hours after the cabinet meeting. So the president hastily sent for his cabinet to talk over this leak. Each man had a different idea of it.

Finally Mr. Webster arose, saying, "You, gentlemen, go on with your discussion, and I'll be back in a minute." In a few minutes he returned and repeated every word that had been spoken in the room in his absence. He explained that if by standing close to the door outside the cabinet room you held your ear to it you could not distinguish one intelligible word, but if moving back from the door and a little to one side upon a certain spot in the carpet you kept an attentive ear every word could be plainly heard as though whispered. Some enterprising eavesdropper had been experimenting with the door and had found that upon that exact spot there was some acoustic property of the door or room that conveyed the sound in perfect entirety.

"Going—Going"—

The auctioneer had auctioneered for the last time, for he was very ill and lay now almost at death's door.

Beside his bed stood the doctor and the auctioneer's wife, anxiously watching each symptom, each movement, each respiration.

"Doctor," hoarsely whispered the hammer wielder's wife, "what is his pulse now?"

The doctor raised the patient's wrist. "His pulse," he answered, "is now going at 104."

The auctioneer sat up excitedly in bed.

"Going at 104!" he cried feebly. "Going at 104! Who'll make it 105? Do'l hear 105 for a pulse that has been running steadily for forty-seven years and never once stopped? Will you bid 105? Who'll make it 105?"

But no one made it 105. And a minute later the auctioneer was going—going—gone!—Exchange.

How Eskimo Women Die.

On her first entrance to her new hut of snow an Eskimo woman is buoyed by hope of welcoming a son. What of her last incoming to those narrow confines? She knows that the medicine man has decided that her sickness is supernatural and says it is laid upon her by spirits of snow. She lives upon the feebly burning lamp beside her, upon food and drink set close at her hand. She sees her loved ones pass out of the doorway that needs no tunnel entrance to keep chill airs away, for presently the door is sealed with snow. The chill of death pierces through her enveloping furs. Her tomb insures that no long tarrying will be here. The soul, companioning with her, may refresh itself with food; but, starving and freezing, her feeble body will witness even that soul's departure and know that its hour has come to perish alone.—Harper's Bazar.

Paying For the Spots.

"I conceived a perfectly dandy scheme for saving my table linen and teaching Jack to be dainty about his carving," said a young married woman. "Every time he gets a spot on the tablecloth I have him cover it with a coin. The larger the spot the larger the coin, and more often than not it takes paper money to cover it all. Then Norah takes up the money when she clears the table, and we save it up to buy kitchen utensils."—New York Press.

Albion and Columbia.

"Albion, the Cen of the Ocean," was written and composed by Jesse Hammond, an English government clerk official, about 1820 and was heard above all others in the theaters, music halls and on London streets. It is apparent that "rem of the ocean" fits an island more aptly than our large tracts of continent, and "borne by the red and the blue" the red of the British army and blue of the navy) is more logical than the meaningless line "borne by the red, white and blue." The lines of the English songs are almost word for word identical with our version, "The Red, White and Blue."—Exchange.

Police Court Busy.

Tuesday was something of a busy day in the Police Court. In the forenoon Lena Gorten, a colored resident of East High street came down town looking for Marshal Grace. Her clothing was bloody and she had a bandage about her head and a pistol in her hand which she declared she had taken from aunt Debby Barber after she had fired one shot at her. After telling her that she would make a good deputy the Marshal sent her to lay her troubles before the city attorney and told her that he would go after aunt Debby. Accompanied by her little dog she immediately sought the office of Mr. W. F. Grigsby, but while there the little dog, unfortunately became restless and wandered into the corridor, on returning heentered the office of the city clerk whose office adjoins that of the city attorney. Not seeing his owner, and believing that the city clerk was what remained of the city attorney, he evidently thought aunt Debby had been there too and becoming frightened jumped out of the widow on the street below. A great howl was raised but soon his owner appeared and all started to the office of the city judge. However two assistants believing that the canine had seen enough of the city administration refused to allow him to go further than the steps.

The sequel to the transactions of the morning was the trial in the Police Court that afternoon. Aunt Debby evidently believed that there were two sides to every controversy and had warrants issued for "four black ones" as she called them, who were Lena Gorten, Sallie Gorten, Hattie Gerton and Mattie Stevenson and whose trial was held first, Hattie Gorten being dismissed, Sallie Gorten befined $5 and the other two $15 each. Aunt Debby's trial was set for next Tuesday. When testifying against the others she said that her child who "is a angel from heaven" had been continually assaulted with rocks and when she interfered she received a severe threshing. She produced a basket of rocks which she declared had been thrown at her, and became very indignant when asked by the attorney for the defense, if she gathered them up on her way to the Court House, and declared that she was a "pure white nigger."

Something Doing.

Persons who attend the Fair this week will find much to interest them. Those who delight in fine stock will find all they are looking for as there is a greater number of fine horses there than ever before. The rings for other live stock are much better than last year.

Besides these attractions which constitute the Fair proper, there are manny other attractions on the ground. New Albany Military Band, one of the best in the country is furnishing the music and the privilege for small shows and exhibitions has been sold to an association which conducts a large number of small shows so there is quite a number of small tents on the ground and a variety of exhibitions. The Flying Dutchman the favorite of the young children and the old children is there as usual. The management has this year tried to furnish amusement for everybody and it looks as if they have succeeded.

Wall-Vandyke

Mr. William B Vandyke and Miss Ardie H. Wall were quietly married at the Baptist church by Rev. W. H. Williams yesterday morning at 11 o'clock.

While it was generally known that the young people intended to marry, yet only a few of the most intimate friends were apprised of the fact that it was to take place when it did.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Wall, of Mooresville, and is a popular and talented young lady with many friends. Mr. Vandyke is an enterprising young farmer whom everybody likes. The New Leader extends congratulations and wishes them a long and happy married life.

DEATHS

Kelly

Just emerging from infancy to childhood, just as the brightness of a happy life was opening to her vision little Catharine Kelly the three year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. P. Kelly was called by the death angel to a brighter and a happier sphere. Her death occurred yesterday morning from scarlet fever. She was a very happy disposed child, and was the pride of parents and of brothers and sisters and in her death they have suffered a severe loss.

Brown

Quite a sad death was that of Miss Mary Brown which occurred Tuesday afternoon after a short illness of typhoid fever. Miss Brown was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Brown, of Valley Hill. She had just reached the thirteenth year of her age and was on the threshold of womanhood when the final summons came. Being the possessor of a cheerful disposition and a charming manner she unconsciously drew to herself the love and friendship of all, and will be much missed not only in her own home but by a large circle of friends and neighbors as well.

Funeral services were conducted at Willisburg yesterday by Rev. W. A. Wolfe and burial was in the cemetery at that place.

Montgomery

A death that was a shock to his many friends because of its comparative suddenness was that of Mr. Wm P. Montgomery which occurred on last Monday afternoon at five o'clock. Montgomery attended church at St. Dominic's Sunday morning and was in his usual health until about 12 o'clock Sunday night when he was taken violently ill with Cholera Morbus, which in connection with heart trouble, caused his death the next day. On the 7th day of this month he celebrated his 78th birthday. Mr. Montgomery was born and reared in Washington county and is the last of a family of six children. When a young man he was married to Miss Annie Woodward, who lived but a few years. No children of this marriage survive. On the 29th of December 1862 he was married to Miss Martha Ann Carrico, who with the following ten children survives, namely: Messrs Thomas, Robert, Sam and Charles Montgomery, Mrs. Laura Wheatley, Mrs. Kent Smith, Mrs. Brook Rudd, Mrs. R. S. Mudd and Miss Sallie Montgomery, all of this place, and brother Christopher Montgomery of the Order of Xavena Brothers, of Massachusetts.

Mr. Montgomery was well known throughout the county, and was of a hospitable nature being one of those men of whom it can be said, "The latchstring of his door always hung on the outside.

Funeral services were conducted at Hill's Requiem Mass by Father Sullivan at St. Rose yesterday and burial was in St. Dominics cemetery. The pall bearers were Luke Barlow, Fred Carrico, John A Polin, Joe Spalding, Joe Polin and Lee Carrico.

Good Roads.

Mr. Editor:—

Having recently traveled over some 130 or 140 miles of road in our county I have noticed with much pleasure the splendid improvement in the farming interest in many ways and while some may express surprise at the increase in land one only has to make a little closer study and see the possibilities of Washington county lands when placed under condition to do her best, and that will come as the farmer becomes each year a better student of his own business and is more willing to be taught by his better informed brother (and I use the word Brother in its broadest sense.) But while it is true our county is going forward by leaps and bounds in an increased interest and a more intelligent application of the science of farming, is it not also true that we are asleep to other equal improvements that is of even more importance and that should go hand in hand with our increased interest in the improvement of the home, is it not true that our roads are going each year, aye each month that will soon effect the value not only of our farm land but almost every product of the farm.

Now sir, I am not criticising our county officials, on the contrary I take it for granted that that they are doing the very best they know under the system now in operation and with the money available under the present system, but is there not some plan, is there not some one among us who can suggest a plan by which we can improve, yea by which we have ideal roads. I remember seven years ago in riding over this same road when they were much better than they are today with a gentleman from one of the Northern States, how he would remark each day, my, my, how rich is your country in road building material and how indifferent your people seem to be to good roads. Are we indifferent? I think not. I believe the people want good roads and I for one believe they will not finally be satisfied without them. The question is how may we have them before the burden would be very great.

Could we not with $100,000 while we still have the foundation, while we have a good road bed, could we not with that amount buy road building machinery and still have enough money to put the roads of our county in first class condition, and could we not do that without an increase tax rate or with very little increase. We could in my opinion well afford to bond the county for the amount suggested place our county where she properly belongs and never feel the burden of improvement that would mean much to our citizenship.

Now Mr. Editor this communication is not in a spirit of controversy but with the hope that others may offer suggestions and that the whole people may become interested in a matter that effects every citizen of our county

THE LOST UMBRELLA.

A Torrent of Thanks Did Not Accompany Its Recovery.

It was on a train coming through southern Wisconsin. On board was one of those impromptu comedy crowds that hadn't any idea it was funny. One woman suddenly descended on her husband with the thrilling inquiry:

"Where's that umbrell' of mine?"

"I dunno," growled the husband.

"Well, you had it last."

"Didn't neither."

"You did, too, and you've got to git busy findin' it. I bet it's up forrerd there where we was a-settin' before we come back hyer."

More growls from the husband, who was sleepy.

"You got t' help me hunt it, anyway."

She took him and went forward, peering under the seats. All up and down the aisle they went, searching rabidly. The more uncomfortable the stopping made her the madder and worse excited the woman got and the worse her husband growled.

Finally she began poking under the seats to see if she could touch the umbrella in some recess beyond her vision.

A girl with a blue feather in her hat who had been timidly watching the performance and showing a blushing tendency to interrupt could contain herself no longer.

"What's that you're poking under the seats with? Isn't that the lost umbrella?" she asked.

The woman straightened up, gave one look at the tightly grasped instrument and snapped out, "Yes, it is!"

She said it just as if it had all been the fault of the girl with the blue feather in her hat.—Chicago News.

At Which One of the Parties Was Sure to Win.

By AINSWORTH RHODES.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

The first time I saw Daisy she was coming over her father's broad acres on a horse whose lope was very like a rocking chair. She was riding straddle with divided skirts. No other woman on the ranches thereabout would ride in any other costume. Barker was riding beside her, and the two made a very handsome pair. The brim of his sombrero was flattened against his forehead by the wind, a lariat hung at his saddle bow, and his splendid figure was revealed by his costume—the flaunty shirt and trousers, with boots to his knee.

Daisy had gone out from the east with her father, who became a sheep raiser, and she had become fascinated with ranch life. Unfortunately she had formed of a romantic idea of the gallant cowboy, and Barker being physically a perfect specimen, he had persuaded herself, or, rather, he had persuaded her, that he was just the man for her. I say "unfortunately" because he was not in educated man and his every way beneath her. There were other features about him to render him undesirable which will appear presently.

The couple passed me, all of us acknowledging, though they were unknown to me, and I rode on to the ranch house, where I had business with John Nolan with reference to a large purchase of wool. While dickering with him on his veranda up the roadway came the couple I had met and alighted at the door of the stage, throwing their bridle reins over a post, they walked up on to the veranda. Then I learned that Daisy was Nolan's daughter.

As the pair passed into the house I noticed a cloud hit over the face of the girl's father. I knew by Barker's bearing toward her that he was in love with her, and I judged that his attentions were not relished by Nolan. But he said nothing to me then, and we went on with our dickering. When I arose to go he said:

"There's no place about here in which you will be comfortable except my house. Send for you traps."

I accepted the invitation, especially as I was pleased at having another chance at Miss Daisy. I knew she had a lover, but my attraction for her did not then go so far as to intend to come between them. I merely liked the idea of being near her during my stay.

But I stayed a short while, and it was not very long before she and I each made a discovery. I discovered that I wanted her, and she discovered that she didn't want Barker. Meanwhile I found out something else—that he had become frightfully jealous of me, and if I took her away from him he would probably kill me. At first he and I spoke to each other when we met either on the ranch or elsewhere. Then he only noticed me at the Nolan house.

I thought it best after awhile to remove to the (so called) hotel, a mile from Nolan's. If anything happened between Barker and myself I preferred that it should not happen under Nolan's roof. So one day I removed my luggage to new quarters.

One morning I was sitting on the porch of the hotel smoking a briarwood pipe. Barker came out of the barroom, where he had been drinking, and took a seat about thirty feet from me. I didn't know he was there till, turning my head, I saw him out of the corner of my eye sighting his revolver at me.

Naturally I started.

"Hold on there," said Barker. "Your pipe makes a dog target. We don't allow people to smoke such expensive pipes out here!"

The words were scarcely out of his mouth when I felt a faint tick on the bowl of the pipe, heard the crack of a gun and knew that a bullet had passed through the pipe.

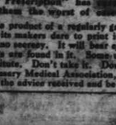

"Wall, up!" he growled as I was about to rise. "Your pipe won't draw with a hole in it, but it's still a mighty good target."

I snatched a look at him. He was evidently under the influence of liquor. I felt sure that if I didn't let him shoot at my pipe he would shoot at me and nerved myself to stand another shot. Indeed, there was all I could do, for I was unarmed. But a cold chill ran down my back and a cold sweat stood out all over me. Nevertheless I put up a good front. I sat with comparative composure, occasionally letting a puff cloud of tobacco smoke escape from the bowl, but not daring to look at a downdraft for fear of interfering with the man's aim.

Several persons from inside the hotel, having heard a shot, came out to discover what had occurred. They arrived just in time to see the second shot and the top of the bowl of my pipe cut off. They at once took in the situation and, instead of interfering, not knowing my internal condition, they cried out, "Good pluck, stranger!" "Steady nerve!" "He ain't no tenderfoot!" and such like compliments.

Presently a third shot shattered what was left of the bowl of my pipe, and only the stem remained in my mouth. Whether my nerve made Barker half ashamed of himself or that he was headed off by the admiration of the others I don't know, but he passed from further shooting. I fancy, however, that he was not entirely free from

WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN

Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and get the free advice of a physician of over 40 years' experience and skilled specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter of this sort has careful consideration, and is regarded as sacredly confidential. Thousands of grateful women write gratefully to Dr. Pierce when they would shrink from talking to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these distressing examinations are generally needless, and in women, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

Dr. Pierce's treatment will cure you right in the privacy of your own home. It's Favorite Prescription has cured hundreds of thousands, some of them the worst of cases.

It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. The only one good enough that its makers dare to print its every ingredient on its bottle-wrapper. There's no secrecy. It will bear examination. No alcohol and no habit-forming drugs are found in it. Some other medicine dealer may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, President, Buffalo, N. Y.,—take the advice received and be well.

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Over five thousand deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney trouble if kidney trouble is allowed to advance. The kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, brick-dust or sediment in the urine, head ache, back ache, lame back, dizziness, sleeplessness, nervousness, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell.

Bladder troubles almost always result from a derangement of the kidneys and better health in that organ is obtained quickest by a proper treatment of the kidneys. Swamp-Root corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest because of its remarkable health restoring properties. A trial will convince anyone.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, and don't let a dealer sell you something in place of Swamp-Root—if you do you will be disappointed.

BATSMEN TAKE LESS OF A CHANCE

In Old Days Pitchers Would Go Far to Gain Advantage.

IT'S VERY DIFFERENT NOW.

Even With the Change in Method the Batter Is in Danger—Many Instances Where Being Hit by Ball Affects Playing Ability.

When Frank Chance, manager of the Chicago Nationals, was struck on the head by a ball buried by Pitcher Gasper of Cincinnati recently it recalled the fact that many star baseball players have lost their effectiveness through being hit by thrown balls.

That more batsmen are not injured by being hit by pitched balls speaks well for the skill of the present day pitcher. In the old days the pitcher would not infrequently let one go straight at the batter's head in order to drive him away from the plate. Such a proceeding is rare nowadays. Working the edges of the plate seems to have proved more effective. Nevertheless the fire the batter faces is dangerous.

One of the worst cases of head hitting was that of Hugh Jennings, now manager of the Detroit club, by Amos Rusie. Jennings, a diminutive chap, was noted for his close hugging of the plate and his willingness to accept a base by being hit by the pitcher. He relied upon his quickness of eye to minimize the effect of the blow. Rusie had a wide, jumping curve ball. Jennings was willing to turn his shoulder, accept a deflecting blow or let it hit his shirt front or the back of his knickerbockers. He could do this with pitchers of average curve, but Rusie's curve was too sharp in the break and too fast for him to avoid. Jennings stood close and got one full in the head. He fell flat. For four days his life was despaired of, but a powerful constitution pulled him through, though he never was the same nervy man again at the plate, and it was months before he could play.

Jennings, by the way, is an extremely durable person. While at Cornell he dived face first against the concrete bottom of an empty swimming tank. The man is a marvel of vitality and energy. He sustained two shocks that would have killed the average man, yet he is as full of energy today as a dynamo.

Roderick Wallace, the famous infielder of the Browns, had his batting efficiency seriously and permanently impaired twelve years ago when he was hit in the head by a ball thrown by "Chick" Fraser, who was then with the Louisville club. Wallace was knocked flat, and it was many days before he went to bat again. A contribution of iron enabled him to withstand the shock, but he never was quite the same hitter afterward.

Dan Hoffman, the center fielder of the Browns, was the victim of a fearful blow at the hands of Jesse Tannehill, then with Boston, some years ago. Hoffman was at the time deemed the most promising young player in the American league. He was having his first season, and a brilliant one it was. One day he made a triple, a double and a single against Tannehill in three trips to the plate. The fourth time up Tannehill hit him a terrific blow over the right eye. It almost killed the trained and muscular young athlete. Hoffman lay as if dead, and it was four days before he recovered consciousness. Then his nerves were ruined. From 170 pounds he declined to 128. He could not sleep or eat for six months, and the following season he had to get along as best he could with only one eye. Hoffman says that it has taken him six years to get back his full strength. He has never been able to hit left handed pitchers since the day he was hurt. Now, six years after, Hoffman is at the mercy of the average left handed pitcher.

Johnnie Lush, the star pitcher of the Cardinals, was hit by Andy Coakley on the neck and all but killed. His neck has never been straight since that time, and for years his health was seriously impaired.

Roger Bresnahan was hit and severely hurt by Jack Taylor in 1904. For a long time after this injury Bresnahan wore a semi-mask that protected the exposed side of his head against the pitcher.

Hundreds of lesser lights have been hit and injured to a degree less serious than those mentioned. It all goes to show that baseball is not without its great dangers, especially to men at the bat. Most of the injuries on the field have come about through collisions between fielders, such as the one that cost the life of "Hub" Collins. Collins' fatal collision was with Harry Stovey at Boston many years ago.

Batted balls injure very few players, though the way men hit them about in practice would often make one wonder that accidents are not more frequent. The most notable accident of this sort was when Schriver of Pittsburg hit William Hart of the same club on the chin with a ball batted in practice. The drive shattered Hart's jaw. It was wired up again Hart is now fifty years old and is rated high among the pitchers of the Southern league.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

BEWARE!

THIS, children,
That you see
Aloft
With spreading tail
Of light,
That paints
A bright
And lurid streak
Across the sky
At night,
A comet is,
With curious ways
Quite little understood,
But, children,
It won't eat you up
If you will just
Be good.
As for
The children
Who are bad,
I wouldn't promise that
It wouldn't gulp them
At a bite,
Bones,
Overcoat
And hat.
You cannot tell
When comets come,
Like some wild
Thunderstorm
Or like
A redhot
Inshoot curve,
Just how
They will perform.
So, children,
'Tis the safest plan
To mind your p's and q's,
Your mas,
Your uncles
And your aunts,
Your pas and Cousin Sues,
And wash
Your face and hands and keep
Your shoes
And stockings dry,
And when
The comet comes
I guess
That it
Will pass you by.

His Great Need.

"He has a most remarkable memory."

"He isn't in any business that calls for it, is he?"

"Business! No."

"Then it is remarkable."

"No. You see, his wife believes everything he says."

A New Discovery.

We are starting in a way that promises great things. Right off the bat is the discovery of the fourth dimension.

A mere boy of eleven years has gone out with his gun, as it were, and brought the thing in. I do cannot see it, but it is there. He says so, and he proves it by figures that no one but a professor can follow and the layman never can tell how much of it they understand and to what extent they are only looking wise lest they give themselves away.

We have to take his word for it. He can no more put it in a cage and exhibit it about the country than can the discoverers of the pole place on exhibition their find.

All honor the bright little boy. May he go on and on now that he has started, for we see no reason, since he has his hand in, that he shouldn't discover a fifth, sixth or seventh dimension.

Pleasant Lapse.

"How is Charley getting on on the stage?"

"Very nicely. He hopes to be a star next year."

"Why not a comet?"

"Why a comet?"

"It would be so nice to have him come back in about seventy-six years."

Cured Her.

"She hasn't any faith in the doctors."

"Ever sick?"

"No."

"Just on general principles, then?"

"General principles nothing. She had to spe one for breach of promise."

Felt Safe.

"My son, look out for those girls. They have designs on you."

"Never fear, dad. The only designs on me are the tattoo marks on my arm."

Drew the Line.

He was a robber-bold and bad,
And just what he stirred up wrath,
Because when working in his line
He took everything but a bath.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

It is very often the person who doesn't talk very much about it who is most set upon accomplishing a thing.

We never can tell what is going to happen, and it probably would be monotonous and irritating to such a degree if we could that we would sit up nights to get a change in the program.

People who do a vast amount of bragging are always putting a hypothetical case. They have no time to do anything else.

Silence is a good thing to have in your possession when things are warming up and other people are getting angry.

More people would hear the call of the soil if it didn't call to heavy lifting.

A man is known by the company he keeps at a distance.

When there is a fly in the ointment she pauses to be sorry for the fly?

Successful Women.

Miss Catherine M. Cook, state superintendent of public instruction for Colorado, and Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker took the leading parts in the laying of the cornerstone of the first building erected in Colorado to be devoted exclusively to the development of household art and women's work. The building is the gift of Senator Guggenheim to the Colorado Agricultural college.

WOOD BLOCK PRINTING.

Charming Effects Gained From This Work.

CUSHION WITH WOOD BLOCK DESIGN.

Curtains, porch and bungalow pillows, portieres, couch covers, table runners, bags of all sorts—in fact, anything that can be stenciled—can just as successfully be printed by the wood block process.

If one cannot draw a design for a carved wood block it is perfectly possible to adapt one from something at hand. Designs suitable to be traced and then carved on wood blocks can be obtained from wall paper or fabrics with conventional designs.

A little practice will soon teach the worker what to eliminate and what to keep to make a well balanced, harmonious design suitable for this charming craft.

Sailboat Girls Like to Pose.

Woman's place in the sailboat is a problem now agitating amateur sailors. The mariners who take their summer vacation as their only opportunity to sail the tricky catboats have found that most of their accidents have been due to the recklessness of their women passengers. It seems to be an inveterate feminine longing to pose about the decks after the manner of girls on magazine covers. The woman who sits on the cabin top is the hardest to deal with. Whenever the boom jibes the swing of it is likely to knock her into the water. Now it has been discovered that the place for women on catboats is in the cockpit, but this will probably kill sailing as a pastime for women, because it keeps them almost completely bilden.

A Woman's Plan.

Mrs. Ellen H. Richards' proposition for working people to live in hexagonal buildings fifteen stories high and literally surrounded by sunlight and air is not aesthetic, but it is rather terrible from an architectural point of view. But that needn't matter if these "towers" will but solve the congestion of cities and aid in the improvement of sanitary conditions.

Now's the Time to Buy Lingerie Gowns

This is the season of the year to buy a lingerie gown cheap. The shops are all marking down their best models, and one sometimes can purchase for less than half the original price a frock that in the beginning of the season was prohibitive.

Then if one does not care for ready made clothes there is at present the opportunity of obtaining at greatly reduced rates pieces of lace and lovely lengths of insertion and flouncings.

The lingerie gown illustrated is a French creation; but, as you see, it may be copied at small cost. The materials used are all over eyelet embroidery flouncings. The skirt consists of two deep pieces of the flouncing put together with a wide insertion of val lace. At the bottom of the skirt, under the scalloped edge of the flounce, is a scanty ruffle of the valenciennes lace. The peasant bodice is formed of eyelet and lace. Outlining the round neck is a piping of black velvet.

LOU AND JESSIE.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.]

Mrs. Spencer had dropped in on the bride of four months. She had had her eye on young Mrs. Gray for some time and was now prepared to shatter her idol.

After observing that there were five cases of married couples separating recorded in the paper this morning she went on to add that the way husbands were carrying on these days was something perfectly awful.

"I never read about those things," replied the young wife. "Of course there are good and bad husbands, but my Billy is one of the very best."

"Y-e-s," said Mrs. Spencer grudgingly and with a look of pity in her eyes. "I thought my husband was almost an angel for several years, and then he was arrested for having five wives."

"But Billy is different, you know."

"Perhaps. On Monday I was in the telephone booth at Calder's drug store to talk with my daughter. It's a double booth, you know. Just as I was ready to ring up, your husband entered the other booth and called up a young woman and had a conversation with her."

"But he didn't say anything to me about it," replied the wife. "What name did he call the lady by?"

"There were two of them before he got through, and he called them Lou and Jessie. He said he'd have more money for them soon. Mrs. Gray, don't go on deceiving yourself as I did."

"But—but I don't think he knows any ladies by those names," faltered the wife as her eyes filled with tears.

"You mean he hasn't told you that he does. Of course not. My husband didn't tell me that he had four other wives. Husbands are sleek, slick and sly. You have got to be crafty to find them out. However, if you want to sit down and do nothing I've no objections."

"But what can I do? I don't know who Lou and Jessie are."

"What can you do? You can be in the telephone booth at noon today; you can hear him talk; you can get sight of him; you can go home and pack your trunk; you can stand right up to him and tell him that his perfidy is discovered."

At noon young Mrs. Gray was in one of the telephone booths at Calder's. Up to the moment she started from home she had said to herself that she wouldn't go.

She had been waiting in the booth only five minutes when a step she knew entered the store. Then some one sat down in the other booth. Her heart was throbbing as central was ringing and a voice called:

"Give me 2043 Jackson."

The number went down on a slip of paper, in the booth at the man's back.

"Hello! Is that you, old man? Well, how are Lou and Jessie today? I didn't sleep two hours last night for thinking of 'em. Haven't moved yet, eh? Oh, no, I'm not going to throw up my hands. I'll send you a check by messenger at 9 o'clock. I picked Lou and Jessie, and I'm going to stand by 'em. Good-by."

At the usual hour of 6 o'clock Billy Gray came home whistling. He was happy, also hungry, also longing for the kiss of strawberries and cream. He entered the sitting room to find a woman seated on a trunk.

She had her hat on, and some things she had failed to find room for in the trunk were piled on a chair. The woman was his wife, and she looked up at him with a cold stare.

"Is it you, Billy?" Good lands, but what does this mean? Is your mother dead?"

"Stand back, sir!" she replied as she motioned him off. "I am neither Lou nor Jessie!"

"But what is it? You are pale. You have been crying. You have packed your trunk. Tell me what has happened."

"Sir," she said as she rose from the trunk and extended a piece of paper, "here are the proofs. I don't think you'll want to ask any further questions."

"No. 2043 Jackson," he read and then asked:

"But what is it? What does this mean?"

"It means Lou and Jessie, sir! I was right there in the telephone booth this noon when you conversed with them. You picked Lou and Jessie and you'll stand by them! Will you have the kindness to get me and my trunk to the depot? I am going to mother. If you think Lou and Jessie will object I can find a cab myself."

Billy didn't rush forward and try to throw his arms around her. He didn't try to explain. He simply got down on the floor and laughed and rolled over and kicked about until the stern control of wife rendered if the sudden blow had taken away his reason. She had almost decided to send for a doctor when he got a hold on himself and rose up and pulled her down on a chair beside him and said:

"No. 2043 Jackson is the office of a stockbroker. I can bring you the telephone book and show you. Lou and Jessie are the names of two copper mines I am interested in. The broker is carrying me on a margin. The stock is dull and down, and I've lost a lot, but I am hoping for a rise and hanging on. Here's a circular telling all about the Lou and Jessie and several other mines."

"And you—you—"

"I am not a perfidious wretch. Hustle that hat off and I'll help you get dinner."

Furniture Covering.

If you do not wish to go to the expense of having covers for your furniture made by the upholsterer try the expedient of pinning on summer covers.

Cut pieces the exact size of chair or section of sofa, allowing enough to turn in a hem all around edge if it be not bound with wash braids.

Fasten the pieces in place with big headed white pins placed as close as upholsterers' tacks. The pins are ornamental and form a trimming. If less contrast is desired get pins of gilt or color of braid.

Thunderstorms and Milk.

The popular belief that thunderstorms sour milk seems to be pretty thoroughly exploded. Experiment has shown that milk deprived of lactic organisms is not affected by climactic conditions, and if milk is kept cold it does not sour in thundery weather. The apparent connection between thunderstorms and sour milk is probably due to the sultry conditions preceding the storm.

In Bad Fix

"I had a mishap at the age of 41, which left me in bad fix," writes Mrs. Georgia Usher, of Conyers, Ga. "I was unconscious for three days, and after that I would have fainting spells, dizziness, nervousness, sick headache, heart palpitation and many strange feelings.

"I suffered greatly with ailments due to the change of life and had 3 doctors, but they did no good, so I concluded to try Cardui.

"Since taking Cardui, I am so much better and can do all my housework."

Take CARDUI

J 41

The Woman's Tonic

Do not allow yourself to get into a bad fix. You might get in so bad you would find it hard to get out.

Better take Cardui while there is time, while you are still in moderately good health, just to conserve your strength and keep you in tip top condition.

In this way your troubles, whatever they are, will gradually grow smaller instead of larger—you will be on the up-grade instead of the down—and by and bye you will arrive at the north pole of perfect health.
